“Tongue in cheek” game parodies Donald Trump’s mission to build £1 billion golf course

An eager little cartoon Donald Trump is on a serious mission to build a multi-million pound golf course on Balmedie Beach in North Aberdeen, in a fun new game.

“Donald Trump Golf Attack” has been put together by high profile Scottish games development firm T-Enterprise.

The light-hearted game has been developed to demonstrate the American tycoon’s recent battle to get the go-ahead from Scottish ministers.

You can play the game at: <http://www.t-enterprise.co.uk/flashgame/playgame.aspx?id=trumpg1>

Following objections from conservationists who are concerned about the effect the resort will have on a rare sand dune habitat, players control a cartoon Donald using his love of golf to make certain species of Scottish wildlife extinct!

Set to the backdrop of a typical golf course, Donald’s aim is to exterminate as many animals as possible in a set time.

T-Enterprise’s MD Sadia Chishti said: “The game has been created to make light of the political problems that Donald is experiencing in being granted permission to build the £1billion golf course.”

She added: “Not only are conservationists concerned about the effect the resort will have on nature, business lenders have said with the economy struggling Donald Trump’s development could create much-needed jobs as well as boosting the construction and tourism industries.

“The game is a flippant portrayal of Donald’s urge to build the golf course on Balmedie Beach and does not condole golf violence in any fashion.”

T-Enterprise is a games development business based in Glasgow. It employs six people and works with businesses across the UK.

Recently it captured national headlines with the launch of a game where players help a Heather Mills character collect her £24m divorce settlement by throwing water around a courtroom.

Other recent games include gentle ribbing of British Airways for the Heathrow terminal five PR disaster.
