Games developers turn Hockey Mum Sarah Palin into Pitbull in new game

Wannabe American vice president Sarah Palin has been literally turned into the “pitbull with lipstick” she claims to be in a new computer game released by a Scottish company.

T-Enterprise has released a free online game called Puck Palin, where Palin is shown as a cartoon dog with lipstick.

In the game players control her in Central Park New York, firing hockey pucks at TV screens displaying images of Barack Obama.

But she has to avoid hitting rival wannabe vice president Joe Biden.

You can play the game free at: www.t-enterprise.co.uk/puckpalin.

T-Enterprise’s MD Sadia Chishti believes Sarah Palin is such a strong character; she makes it very easy to create a parody.

She said: “When she accepted her nomination, Palin called herself a pitbull with lipstick and described herself as the average hockey mum.

“She has such a distinctive look that it would have been wrong not to create a parody of someone who wants to be the second most powerful person on the planet.”

T-Enterprise is a games development business based in Glasgow. It employs six people and works with businesses across the UK.

In the last few months it has captured a clutch of headlines across the globe for its weekly games.

One recent game attacked Sarah Palin for her environmental policies. In another, players had to help George Bush in a shoot out with Congress to get his bank bail-out billions.
