Clinton throws more punches than Obama in online game!

A software development firm has built a fun online game demonstrating the dramatic duel between Democratic Sens. Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama in their famous race for the White House - with Clinton currently in first place!

T-Enterprise based in North Lanarkshire has just released the free flash game at <http://www.t-enterprise.co.uk/flashgame/playgame.aspx?id=usprimary>.

And interesting stats reveal the virtual Clinton is certainly not afraid of any gender obstacles even though Obama is taking bigger steps to Democratic presidential nomination in real life!

The fun game allows players to choose their competitor in a light hearted boxing match between Clinton and Obama. Over 78% of players chose to challenge Obama in the the ring opting for Clinton's character and a shocking 63% of these were male!

Poor Obama has also received 7,497,235 punches to date with Clinton scraping a mere 3,465!

T-Enterprise's MD Sadia Chishti said: "We built this game to educate children on the biggest debate in American political history, however, stats certainly show if Hilary is capable of taking on a man in the boxing ring she'll do well as the nation's first US President according to UK web users."

T-Enterprise is a bespoke software and game development business based in Coatbridge in North Lanarkshire. It employs six people and works with businesses across the UK.

Recently it captured national headlines with the launch of a game where players help a Heather Mills character collect her £24m divorce settlement by throwing water around a courtroom.

You can play the game free at <http://www.muccachucka.co.uk/>.
